

STORIES LEFT BEHIND

In these last few years I've been working on several bodies of work each with its own unique narrative. This show weaves them into a group of visual short stories. Their themes were drawn from recollections of people and places that have left a lasting impression on my life. Within the stories remain many unspoken conversations whose inherent silences bring me back to an earlier sense of wonder. These feelings align with the faint images still floating in my memory. Alternating between construction and collage I've pieced together images of old roads I've traveled whose pathways are often seen dissolving into light. What holds this work together for me is an everlasting curiosity to revisit where I have been. Looking again with fresh eyes I always uncover another piece of the story left behind in the shadows.
