

RECEIVE

An artist is not so much CREATING as giving form to what is RECEIVED. *

These works have been done over the last six years during a time of my deeping awareness of the dark atmosphere that our country has helped to spread over our world and the contrasting beauty, perfection and durability of life.

The show includes works in watercolor, dry pastel and wool yarn needlepoint tapestries. Remaining porous, permeable and absorbent to what I see and feel, and being precise and diligent in my response is what the time in my studio allows me. Although varied, all the works are personal experiments; manipulating the materials and colors, giving form to my experience, to what I RECEIVE....

What have I learned?

Maybe something about being small, one person, in the varied community of life and beauty.

2026. Heidi Epstein

*John Berger, The Shape of a Pocket