There has never been a time in my life when I haven't been a beachcomber, daydreamer and seeker of visual inspiration.

The White Whale has a literary reference. A "white whale" is something you chase and never catch. It sounds like struggling, but for me it's not - it's a freedom to dive deep and explore artistic choices wherever they take me, no matter how random or counter intuitive it seems. This is how I create my art. The cows - well, I never set out to make cows, so that was a pleasant surprise. I credit time spent in the Skagit Valley and visits to the Sherman's Pioneer Farm on Whidbey Island.
