

My studio is an open space lined with materials, remnants retrieved from a wandering path. I became the caretaker of their histories making them my own. Their pasts are mysterious, thick with time that has collected in layers atop the worn surfaces. Scratching below these veneers reveals stories long hidden from view waiting to be rewritten in my quiet verse.